

The matter of which man's vehicles are composed contains certain vibratory forces; the physical body inclining toward the rotary mode of motion, the emotional body to the translatory mode of motion, and the mental body to the vibratory mode of motion. The vibration of the planetary sphere of MARS affects man's soul across the "wireless" ethers of space, through what is known as the translatory mode of motion, energising the animal or desire-nature in him which is attracted through the senses to desirable objects, the satisfaction of these desires at first giving pleasure but on satiation leading to pain.

While under the influence of 'sin' or ignorance, man foolishly obeys his animal nature; but later, through experience, he learns to control his lower desire nature and thus to rule his stars.

Man is a part of the Universe, therefore he has within himself the same essences as those which exist in the stars. He is a compound of all the elements; but some of these elements preponderate over others at certain stages of his evolution. In the early stages of his development, the animal is uppermost, and he is only conscious that he is attracted by objects outside himself, feeling a force he does not understand; he is then under the rising influence of the martial force; later he learns how to control this force and becomes self-conscious, knowing himself as a separate entity with a force within as well as without ; and finally he becomes super-conscious or conscious of his indissoluble relation to the whole Universe. He thus passes from the animal to the human, and finally to the divine.

"Is it a remarkable coincidence, or a very significant fact, that Saturn, ruler of the tenth house in King George's nativity, is placed in the sign of the Balance, and in the western angle? He came to the Throne at a seriously critical period in the nation's history. Both the rulers of the fourth and tenth are placed in the scales of Justice. It is most significant that the Moon should be in one part of the scales of Libra and Saturn in the other, denoting a levelling up of public interests, and the balancing of accounts between the extreme classes: new and important reform laws: the aid of powerful friends, the unification of party interest, and a better parliamentary system with wiser legislation than England has ever known before.

"The British Empire has now come to the sign of the balance, the turning point in its career, and much will depend upon the patriotism of her people. . . .

"Jupiter ^x culminating at the King's birth favours a peaceful reign, and he will do all that lies in his power to avert war; but he will hardly escape a grave and serious possibility of war during his reign. . . .

"If King George does not do more than any other living man of to-day towards the settlement of the socialistic problem, then it will never be done apart from a revolution. The accession of King George foreshadows a complete revolution in national politics, and the consequent rapid improvement in national affairs."

"The fate of the European nations hangs by the thread of the Emperor of Austria's nativity. It is the weak link in the chain of royal horoscopes. Born under the sign of the Balance, he seems to keep the scale of Justice from touching the beam, and directly this thread is broken there will be an entirely new interweaving.

"The planet Mars in his nativity is exactly upon the ascendant of King George's nativity, therefore it is no idle prophecy to say that if a European war breaks out during the lifetime of these two monarchs the Emperor of Austria will be the direct cause of drawing England into the struggle. Sympathy or agreement between these rulers is not possible. They belong to entirely different planetary rays, and both are very powerful though in a different way."

"The ruling planet of England's King (Mars) is the most exalted in the Kaiser's nativity; it is in conjunction with Neptune in the last decanate of Pisces (\times - m), which forms a link with the Kaiser's ruler, the Moon in Scorpio.

"The Kaiser's horoscope typifies the downfall of the concrete, critical, and egotistical mind. He is representative of the militarism of Germany, the Prussian element. Between two stools, shown by Mars conjunction Neptune in Pisces, he is doomed eventually to fall. His friends will desert him and cause him to engage in some colossal acts of folly. He will ruin his country financially; (Saturn in Leo in the second house in opposition to the Sun). He will close the royal dynasty for Germany, and will be the direct cause of a revolution that will bring a republican government to the seat of power in Germany.

"We should feel sorry for him. He has well played his part, for which he pays a heavy price for the world's future welfare. His remorse may be unspeakable agony. He should beware of the sea, it has a fatal attraction for him. His end will be a grievous one."

“ The invasion of Belgium by Germany is shown by the planet Mercury ruler of the fourth in King Albert's horoscope being in its fall in the sign Pisces, and having, by progression, passed into the twelfth house, the house of enemies. The evil foreshadowed by this will be eventually adjusted owing to the elevated position of Mercury. The King's bravery, his admirable spirit and firmness are well borne out by his nativity, the Sun passing to the trine aspect of the planet Mars in the fiery triplicity.

“ It is interesting to note that the planet Mars in King Albert's nativity is on the place of the Moon and rising in the horoscope of the Crown Prince of Germany, also that the planet Mars in the horoscope of the Crown Prince is rising in the ascendant of King Albert's map. It is also significant that the place of Sun, Neptune and Saturn in the Crown Prince's map is upon the Moon in King Albert's nativity.”

“ There is one remarkable feature about this summer map and its effect upon America, the only country that is shown to gain in any way by the great war. The Moon in Gemini, America's ruling sign, is in trine aspect to Uranus, and a map erected for U.S.A. shows that great financial gain will come to America during the summer quarter. Europe's affliction is America's opportunity to help the world through her open markets.

“ The main feature of the map, however, is the bearing it has upon finance generally, Mars being in the second house in opposition to Jupiter; this denotes enormous expenditure and the financial experiences at the beginning of the news of war.”
